How To Can Beans

The June Farm and Fireside says: "Many of our readers are asking us how to can particular vegetables, such as beans, peas, or corn. Here is the process for beans in detail: Select beans of the same age and color, and plnn to can immediately after picking. String and wash well, and if you do not wish to can them whole cut them into uniform pieces. I like them canned whole. Blanch by placing in boiling water from five to ten minutes, depending on the age of the beans, and then plunge them quickly into cold water. Fill the jars, packing closely. Add one teaspoonful of salt to each quart of beans, fill the jars with boiling water, and put on the tops loosely. Put the jars in the canner. This may be simply a lard pail or wash boiler with a false bottom of wooden slats or, better, a wire rack, and the water in it should cover the cans about one inch. Have the water hot when the jars are set in and bring to a boil quickly. Count the time from the moment it starts boiling, and sterilize the beans two hours. Then remove jars and tighten covers. Use the same method for peas."

Do You Dread Hot Weather?

Does it cut your energy, disturb your stomach or bring you near prostration? The well man isn't afraid of heat. But it is trying on the weakened body.

BUILD UP YOUR STRENGTH

Get your digestion in order, remove all irritation, dispel all stagnation. Put yourself in shape to enjoy the summer with a good tonic.

PERUNA INVIGORATES

It restores the perfection of digestion and removes the inflammation conditions (catarrh) that make you weak. It freshens the blood, steadies the nerves, and supplies just what you need to enter the hot season with confidence. Peruna is a real tonic, with especial efficacy in catarrhal conditions. Liquid or tablet form—whichever is most convenient—will safeguard your health.

Prefers Tiger To Husband

"Say, Billy," she had said, dropping the black fringes over those light gray Irish eyes, as she nervously polished the counter and rearranged the plates of pie, 'you know that swell thirteen dollar flat you was showin' me over last Sunday out at Roxbury? Well, don't take no lease of that—not on my account. I'm—I'm not thinkin' of getting married as much as I was. I like you fine, Bill, but I guess it's my blood. I ain't never told you, but my mother was in the business with a circus, workin' a bunch of performin' lions. Say! she had Bonavita chased clear under the table! The show people that comes here to feed have been after me this long while. They say I've the trick with animals, and I guess I have all right, all right. They want to put me on with a trained tiger. I was round to the arena again last night after the show. Rajah's getting used to me. I've been in the cage twice already, an' he acted fine. I'm real sorry, Bill. But I guess marryin's too slow for me. I've got to have somethin' that takes nerve."

Disappearing Propeller in Motor Rowboat

Equipped with a propeller and shaft that can be make to disappear at will, a new type of motor boat designed and built by a Canadian concern, is transformable immediately into a rowboat, capable of making a landing anywhere. It will also ride without damage over any obstruction, such as submerged logs, driftwood, rocks, or sand bars, being furnished with a skeg which automatically raises the propeller and shaft into a housing above keel, on striding an obstruction. The skeg when raised, forms a continuation of the keelson and at the same time throttles the engine from racing. The boat is fitted with an inboard engine on a stationary bed, located so that the weight falls amidships and keeps the craft on an even keel. A handy lever in the flooring gives complete control over the speed of the boat without touching the engine, and also enables the propeller to be raised into its housing when desired. The change from motorboat to rowboat can be made without leaving one's seat. —From the June Popular Mechanics Magazine.
